Alex takes a practical approach to understanding his clients' specific business goals and industry insights to create tailored solutions for their litigation and dispute resolution.

As a member of the Trial Group, Alex works on a broad spectrum of civil matters, assisting Verrill's senior litigators with important tasks like performing legal research, motion drafting, and identifying key facts through targeted discovery, often from case inception through appeal.

While in law school, Alex served as an intern at the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Maine, and as an academic year judicial extern for the Honorable John H. Rich III of the United States District Court for the District of Maine and for the Honorable Kermit V. Lipez of the First Circuit Court of Appeals. Alex also served as a Case Note and Comments Editor for the Ocean and Coastal Law Journal, publishing work on deep-sea mineral mining policy. During his second year of law school, he was awarded the Harvey Fellowship, an immersive trial practice experience.

Between college and law school, Alex served as a logistics officer in the United States Marine Corps. After leaving active duty in 2019 to attend law school, he continued to serve in a reserve capacity until the start of his final year of law school.

Outside the office, Alex is an amateur furniture maker and a skijoring enthusiast with his dog, Juno.
